Professional Ethics in Construction

The goal of this class is to improve ethical decision-making in the field of construction. One must first evaluate issues, policies, practices and situations. Ethical decision-making and ethical evaluation can be improved with an understanding of ethical perspectives and ethical principles. It will provide the attendees with a basic understanding of ethical theories and principles that will enable application to work/business related situations.

This class will provide learners with an understanding of these ethical theories and ethical principles. They are the basis upon which ethical evaluations of issues can be made. Having evaluated an issue in terms of the various ethical theories and principles, a reasonable and ethical decision can be made.

Course Objectives:

- Evaluate workplace/business issues, policies, practices, situations etc. in terms of ethical perspectives and principles
- Apply ethical principles and theories in the workplace
- Describe the fundamental conditions of an ethical decision according to various ethical theories
